American Literature Course Description:

Selections from the ABeka text American Literature: The exercises provide opportunities for literary analysis as well as for expository and creative writing. All selections and literary trends are examined from the Christian perspective. Additionally, we will be reading aloud in class as much poetry as possible.

Please note: Because of the difficulty of some of the American Literature material, assignments will be adjusted to fit the levels of underclassmen.

Each student will give one oral presentation of a teacher/parent approved, independently read, grade-level appropriate work of American literature. Hopefully these oral presentations will inspire others to read the presented work or another work by the same author. In addition to the oral presentation, the student will submit a standard book report on the work independently read.

Extra Reading: King Lear by William Shakespeare (New Folgers Library edition), A Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne, Death Be Not Proud by John Gunther, and Rebecca by Dauphne Du Maurier. Various types of projects will be assigned on these extra readings.

We will begin the year with a review of the summer read To Kill A Mockingbird by Harper Lee. Bring the Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne to class. The first draft of your VFW essay is due. See homework blog for information on the VFW prompt.

Public speaking, both extemporaneous and with notes, will be included as part of the literature course. While there will of necessity be some written work, such as answering text questions and writing essays, as well as teacher lectures, this course emphasizes students' participation in oral presentations and in class discussions of the material covered.

Other Class Features:

Our Sense and Nonsense Pageant, the evening performance of an end-of-the-year literary pageant, occurs in May. Our students present self-written speeches, memorized literature selections (prose and poetry), character dialogues, character soliloquies, book reviews, musical performances, etc. Those students with a dramatic flair may perform in costume.

Sense and Nonsense, the book (not to be confused with the pageant), is a compilation of middle school and high school students' work that will be collated, edited, and presented to students at the end of the year. Select students may participate in the overall editorial process and gain credit for the experience.

Composition Course Description:

Students will have a writing assignment every week, with emphasis on expository writing as they study correct writing style, peer-edit, receive teacher edits, revise, and rewrite. Many of the assignments will be related to the above literature course; others will come from the teacher. The class enters the following writing contests: the Veterans of Foreign Wars Voice of Democracy Contest and the Letters About Literature Contest sponsored by the Library of Congress. In addition, assignments address the types of essays required on college applications and on the SAT's, including in-class, timed essays. For added interest, we will also touch upon creative writing, short stories and poetry.

With the teacher's guidance, students will maintain a portfolio of their work. This portfolio will show each individual student's progress, particularly their rewriting efforts and concepts mastered.
